

James Nagle

James Nagle was born about 1851 in Wisconsin, second of eight children of George Nagle and Helen Healy. On the 1860 census, the family was living in Hazel Green, Grant, Wisconsin.¹ In 1870, James was a laborer, living with his parents and siblings in Dunleith, Jo Daviess, Illinois.²

James married Emma Louisa Moulding about 1873; they had four children. James was the foreman of the Iron mine before resigning his position and moving to Silver Reef, Washington, Utah Territory.³ On the 1880 census, he is listed with all his siblings in the home of his parents in Jamestown, Grant, Wisconsin.⁴ However, he is also listed with his wife and three children as a miner in Silver Reef, Washington, Utah Territory.⁵

In 1881, James was ill with consumption and left Park City to enter the Sisters' Hospital in Salt Lake City, Salt Lake, Utah Territory.⁶ His wife visited him and found him comfortable and receiving good treatment, so she returned home. She then received the alarming news that he had suddenly died on 17 September 1881.⁷ He was buried at the Mount Calvary Cemetery in Salt Lake City.⁸

After his death, Emma married Joel Calvary Perry about 1883 in Utah Territory. He adopted her four Nagle children and they had two children of their own.⁹ Emma died in 1935 in Montana.¹⁰ She is buried in the Glenwood Cemetery in Park City, Utah.¹¹

¹ United States Census, 1860.

² United States Census, 1870.

³ Park Record [Park City, Utah], 24 September 1881.

⁴ United States Census, 1880. Perhaps the parents listed all their children, including the adult children who may have been living elsewhere?

⁵ United States Census, 1880.

⁶ Utah Deaths and Burials, 1888-1946.

⁷ Park Record [Park City, Utah], 24 September 1881.

⁸ Billiongraves.com

⁹ Familysearch.org

¹⁰ Montana Death Index, 1860-2007; Montana County Births and Death, 1840-2004.

¹¹ Find-a-grave.com